The Breed Club for Kerry Blue and Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terriers in Finland

The Breed Club for Kerry Blue and Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terriers in Finland was founded in 1975 by couple of lovers and enthusiasts of these lovely terriers. The Club is a member of the Finnish Kennel Club and an official breed organization for these two breeds. The official Finnish name for the club is Kerry- ja Vehnäterrierikerho Ry, shortly KV-kerho.

The background for having a joint breed club is very practical; the amount of Kerry Blue terriers in Finland is so small that it's not possible to have an own breed club. Therefore the forces of these two Irish based, high legged terrier breeds have been joint in this Club. Today the Club has about 1 400 members mainly in Finland.

The club aims to increase the knowledge of our breeds and also to combine the persons interested in Kerry Blue and Irish Soft Coated Wheatens Terriers.

The club aims to increase the knowledge of our breeds and also to combine the persons interested in Kerry Blue and Irish Soft Coated Wheaten terriers. The club actively follows the development of the breeds in Finland well as abroad. Other main tasks of the club are for example:

- » Inform and educate dog owners and their dogs so that the characteristics of these breeds can be of practical use, e.g. Arrange courses for trimming, socializing puppies, agility, obedience etc.
- » Educate and authorize judges for breed test in accordance with Finnish Kennel Club's Code of ethics
- » Arrange mental tests and specialty shows
- » Publish a year book of the show dogs
- » Publish a Club magazine Kerry & Vehnä 4 times per year.

The club is also responsible of steering the breeding of Kerry Blues and Wheaten Terriers in Finland. For that purpose, the club has a nominated breeding committee that consist of experienced Kerry Blue and Wheaten Terrier breeders as well as a consulting veterinarian. The breeding committee suggests breed-specific breeding strategies regularly for the Finnish Kennel Club to approve. These strategies work as a guideline that should be followed in breeding activities among Finnish breeders. Among other things these strategies aim to ensure that hereditary diseases commonly occurring in our breeds are taken under control and that their spread is prevented.

The Finnish Kerry Blue and Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier Club welcomes You all to Finland to experience the World Dog Show 2014 and beautiful terriers!

From the President

Dear Friends of our beloved Kerry Blue and Wheaten Terriers, our club is delighted to be able to host a meeting for foreign and domestic enthusiasts of our breeds at the World Dog Show 2014 in Helsinki. Hope you all enjoy your visit!

In Finland we are very serious about our breeds and we want to make it possible that our breeds are cherished by the owners and the breeders –now and in the future. The Club as well as the breeders have taken a big role in assuring that there will be enough genetical diversity in the breeding material making it possible to breed physically and mentally healthy Kerries and Wheatens also in the future.

In this Kerry & Vehnä Special Edition you will find some basic information of our breeds and breeding strategies here in Finland.

Summary of the Breeding Strategy of Kerry Blue Terriers in Finland

Kerry Blue Terrier is originated from the southern parts of Ireland where these blue terriers have apparently been rat catchers and all-purpose farm dogs already for decades. First Kerry Blue Terrier was imported to Finland already in 1932 but some serious breeding of Kerry Blues didn't start until in the end of 1950's and in the beginning of 1960's.

Since the end of 1990's the registrations of the breed have been around the same level. Nowadays about 45 specimen of the breed are registered annually and the total population of the Kerry Blue Terriers in Finland is about 400. Though the breed is based on the same individuals of the Irish bred dogs from 1920's yet there have been developed separate blood lines in some countries and the breeding material is quite well available. In Finland half of the combinations of the matings is based on imported dogs or use of foreign studs.

The first breeding regulation was accepted in the annual meeting of Club in 1991, and since then the breed has had a breed-specific breeding strategy. The regulation of the breeding has been based on recommendations and guidelines without the need for strong rules. Breeder members have followed the breeding regulations and recommendations well. The previous Breeding Strategy was also working well.

The Breeding Strategy aims for characteristics of the breed according to the Breed Standard as well as physically and mentally healthy dogs who should be able to fulfil their position as affectionate pets that are also suitable for various activities. In the Breeding Strategy it is highlighted that different dogs are to be used evenly in breeding in order to keep as many lines as possible vital. The breeding we do today will be the basis of the future breeding programmes.

The general health of the breed has been maintained good. More and more of the breeding combinations fulfill the regulations of the Breeding Strategy in Eye Certification, Hip X-rays as well as in Breeding Coefficient. The Kerry Blue Terrier is generally healthy and long-lived breed, but Kerries also have some hereditary diseases and defects.

In Finland the breed has some (about 20% of the X-rayed stock) mild (C) or moderate (D) hip dysplasia. Since 1995 no dogs with moderate (D) hips (or worse) have been used in breeding. The percentage of the dogs with hip dysplasia (C or D) has been stabilised but the portion of moderate HD has been decreased. In the period of last four years 94% of the breeding combinations fulfilled the recommendations of the Breeding Strategy. This is now the first time that the Breeding Strategy does not allow the use of moderate (D) or worse hips.

In 1980 there has been only one confirmed case of Cataract, but yet it is recommended to have the eyes checked for hereditary abnormalities and the Certification is valid for 24 months.

The Kerry Blue Terriers are more prone to have tumors and malignant tumors i.e. cancer is the most common cause of death in the breed. According to the Finnish Kennel Club's Breeding Database the average age of death is just under ten years. Half of the Kerries have lived to be over ten years of age and 55% of the ones who died under at the age of 10 years had cancer or other diseases.

The average of the Breeding Coefficient (CompuPed/8 Generations) has been around 6% since the beginning of 1990's and the average of last ten year was 6,1%. And still it is possible to make breeding combinations where the coefficient is close to 0%. Even though the breed is small, it has been possible to us to avoid use of Matador Studs. During the last ten years there has been 47 males used as studs and only three of them have more than three litters sired in Finland. And in 61 bitches used in breeding during the last ten years there has been only two bitches who had more than three litters. During the last ten years the ratio between males and bitches used in breeding has been between 0,78 – 1,00 and the average has been 0,9. During the last generation (4 years) the average of the coefficient was 5,85%, average of the sire/dam ratio was 0,82, the average of the age of the males used in breeding was over 5 years and the same for bitches was over 3½ years. The average size of a litter is 5 to 6 puppies.

According to the Breed Standard

Kerry Blue Terrier is upstanding, well-knit and well proportioned, showing well developed muscular body with definite terrier type. Kerry should be elegant yet powerful, well-balanced in construction with effortless powerful ground-covering gate. The single coat is one of the breed's special characters, and it should be silky, soft, wavy and blue in colour. In the exterior the aim is to breed to the Breed Standard and special attention should be paid in the balance of the angulation in front and rear. The true breed type and size should be maintained. The exterior of the Kerry Blue Terriers in Finland is very good and 96% of the specimens shown at the dog shows have been awarded the grade Very Good.

In Finland the Kerries are found to be lively and active, open and friendly towards people but also very calm. There is some aggressiveness towards other dogs. Timid, nervous or aggressive dogs are not to be used in breeding. The Club is instructing the breeders to guide and help the puppy owners in raising their puppies to become well-behaving, social pets as the breed has a strong character and needs determined owner. The breeders should aim in breeding good-natured Kerries that are able to adjust in today's life and make a good company in different kind of activities.

Summary of the Breeding Strategy of Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terriers in Finland

The Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier is an old Irish breed that has been a general purpose dog around the farms of southern Ireland for centuries.

Today, around 150–190 Wheaten Terriers are registered in Finland every year. The total population in Finland amounts to about 1600 dogs. The breed is based on the same Irish ancestry all around the world, and therefore all Wheaten Terriers are quite closely related. A significant amount of Finnish breeding combinations are based on imported sires. Preserving genetic diversity and maintaining a low inbreeding coefficient is a challenge.

The Wheaten Terriers in Finland are generally affectionate, lively and active, but also calm family dogs. There is some timidity and aggression towards other dogs, and in some cases towards humans, and other faults in temperament. The significance of character in breeding should be highlighted more.

Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terriers are generally healthy dogs and usually live a long life, but like all breeds, Wheaten Terriers have some hereditary diseases and faults. Renal dysplasia (RD) is a fatal disease that occurred in the 70s and 80s due to tight line-breeding. The first confirmed RD cases in Finland occurred in 1985, when several puppies of one litter died of this disease. The breed society started a monitoring program the following year, and Finland can be considered the forerunner in the fight against RD as there have been no new cases after 1994. However, a new problem arose in the 1990s as a result of new breeding dogs imported from the USA; protein-losing disorders (PLE/PLN). These disorders are harder to prevent because of their late onset, usually at the age of 4 to 6. Every year some new cases of protein-losing disorder occur. Recently the Genetic testing for PLN – Associated Variant Genes has become a new tool to reduce the incidence of dogs with these variant genes slowly and carefully while still maintaining genetic diversity. The genetic testing of PLN has been promoted by the Breed Club in Finland.

As for hip dysplasia (HD), 23% of Wheaten Terriers screened in the last ten years suffered from mildly or moderately dysplastic hip joints. Elbow joint examinations have become significantly more general during the past four years. Of the examined Wheaten Terriers, 19% showed signs of 1st or 2nd degree changes in their elbow joints. When it comes to eye diseases, some hereditary cataract cases have occurred in the 21st century. In addition to this, one litter suffered from Multiple Ocular Anomalies Syndrome in 2011, and there have been some cases of PRA, although the latest was in 1991. The reproduction of Wheaten Terriers usually goes without problem. The average litter size is 6 puppies.

According to the breed standard, the Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier is by general appearance a hardy, active, short coupled and well-built dog, giving the idea of strength. They should not be too leggy or too low to the ground. A single coat is one of the breed's characteristics, and an adult Wheaten should have a full, silky soft coat that is wavy or softly curled. In Finland, the differences between the two coat types of Wheaten Terriers have evened out during recent years thanks to a general rise in coat quality.

The first breeding regulation was accepted in the annual meeting of the Breeding Committee in 1991, and since then the breed has had a breed-specific breeding strategy. The regulation of breeding has been based on recommendations and guidelines without the need for strong orders. Breeder members have followed breeding regulations and recommendations well. The latest regulation from 2007 has worked well, but it needs some clampdowns on the matters of health surveys and the use of individual breeding dogs, as well as increasing the importance of character and behaviour in breeding.

The development of the inbreeding coefficient towards a lower yearly mean has been positive for the last 15 years. The target coefficient of 8% (CompuPed 8 generations) has so far been achieved in only two years. During the last decennium one male has sired more than the target level of 5% of puppies. An increasing number of breeding combinations meet the recommendations on blood/urine tests as well as eye and hip examinations. Cases of elbow dysplasia support a recommendation

The target program aims for a Wheaten Terrier that is physically and mentally healthy and meets the characteristics of the breed. Wheaten Terriers should continue to fulfill their position as affectionate pet dogs that are suitable for various activities.

The key target of breeding is to keep the breeding stock of Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terriers as diverse as possible. To achieve this goal, inbreeding and Matador breeding are avoided and different dogs are used evenly to keep as many lines as possible vital. The breeding we do today will be the basis of breeding in the future. It is recommended that males are used for breeding evenly throughout their life. The use of older males is recommended from the points of view of progeny evaluation and protein losing disorders.

As for character, the main target is to breed good-tempered Wheaten Terriers adaptable to modern day life and various activities. In the future, the character of Wheaten Terriers should be evaluated and tested on a wider basis in order to compile an ideal character profile for the breed.

When it comes to health, the main target of breeding is to maintain the levels of renal dysplasia (RD) and PRA and add the prevention of elbow dysplasia and Multiple Ocular Anomalies Syndrome to the recommendations. The prevention of hip dysplasia (HD), hereditary cataract, and protein losing disorders (PLN/PLE) will continue by screening breeding dogs for these diseases.

The main target for appearance is an Irish Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier that meets the breed standards.

The target program states the means to meet these goals. These

ACTIVE BREEDS

Text Tanja Rytönen // Pictures Kerry & Vehnä magazine

Kerry Blues and Wheaten terriers are bright and active breeds and matching to these characteristics so are most of their owners.

There are plenty of suitable activities to choose from throughout Finland and therefore we have a pretty nice representation of our breeds in different contests. Not only are we very keen on dog shows, but also in other contests such as agility, obedience trial and rally. In some yearly contests we have a team representation, either of one of the breeds or even mixed teams. This is not only fun for the owners and a great opportunity to meet other Kerry Blue and Wheaten owners, but also a great way to promote our wonderful breeds to the public.

In addition to different contests Kerry Blues' and Wheatens have been actively taking part in temperament tests, behavior tests and mental descriptions in order to gain more information of our two breeds. The club has been arranging the latter to our breeds regularly for some years now and has been able to assemble a database of temperament for both breeds.

The activities we have with our dogs can also bring joy and happiness to other people. There are some active Kerry Blue and Wheaten owners that take part in volunteer work with their dogs. These dogs have been trained and rewarded as care dogs.

Junior Handler

The Finnish Kennel Club started its care dog activities, where volunteering dog owners visit groups of people with special needs, in the year 2001. Care dogs are ordinary family dogs owned by laymen wishing to bring joy and warmth to the life of those who really need it. Most commonly these dogs and their owners visit elderly, children and disabled people in e.g. different institutions, schools and day care centers. In addition, care dogs may visit e.g. mental health patients, people in need for rehabilitation, war invalids or autistics. The activity is based on volunteering, thus the care dog instructors do not receive monetary compensation.
