We're looking for young women who take part in a gender empowering and environmental project at Vir'Volt, an eco-village of international volunteers in France.

In the morning you will work in the development of the eco-village Vir'Volt in the construction of furniture and flower boxes built by recycled materials, you'll learn and you'll help to assemble a yurt, an eco-friendly habitat of 8 metres in diameter.

The afternoons will be dedicated to activities and animations about engagement and empowering concerning gender issues in society, gender discrimination and sexism, advocacy for diversity and gender representations to open up for an intercultural approach through out an exchange with a group of local French young women.

You'll be part of the life of the village managing tasks such as cooking and cleaning, following a planning to create collectively guided by the permanent volunteers of Vir'Volt, step by step in the first days.

You will experience life in a natural site hosted in a comfortable eco-habitat, placed in the protected area of the Gatinais Park. You'll have also the possibility to explore the surroundings according to what interest you the most and to spend one day in Paris.

VIR' VOLT

Vir' Volt is an association located right in the middle of nature, since 1995. Volunteers from all around the world come here to share an intercultural experience, to work and live together learning how to appreciate differences and to act together to protect environment.
