Jukka Tiensuu

To the distant observer, the artistic profile of Jukka Tiensuu (b. 1948) seems to be a collation of contradictions. However, a closer look proves this conclusion erroneous. His externally calm persona, more than the individual features mentioned above, shows the integral overall vision underlying all his activities. Tiensuu's performative and musical eruptions do not contribute towards entropy - quite the contrary. His multi-faceted activities are all centre-seeking: at the focus lies music, the "universe within ourselves."

Jouni Kaipainen

According to Jouni Kaipainen (b. 1956), what a composer needs most is imagination. He refuses to let his imagination be curbed in any way, whether musical or social. He is a modernist, but the past, too, is present in his works. 'New' is not a genre for him, but a challenge to study and seek.

Kaipainen's oeuvre covers every major genre. He is an articulate writer, valuing all forms of contact with the public and the music community. Creative activity is a kind of constant communication.

Markus Fagerudd

Markus Fagerudd (b. 1961) cannot be pinned down with any simple definition. He is an active composer, a theatre performer, and a jazz and rock musician who crosses over musical boundaries effortlessly.

The easy-going Fagerudd never has any difficulty establishing contact with the musicians he works with, whatever the genre.

Sampo Haapamäki

Sampo Haapamäki searched and explored Modernism in his compositions before extending his idiom to microintervals and spectral music. Quarter-tone harmonies have played a key role in his music since 2004. He has written works for instance for the quarter-tone accordion. He won several international prizes at an early stage in his career, including the ISCM Young Composer Award in 2005. His work Kirjo, a concerto for bass clarinet and chamber orchestra, was awarded the Teosto Prize in 2006; the jury described it as a “jubilant and bold work unheeding of boundaries”.

Timo-Juhani Kyllönen

Creating music is for Timo-Juhani Kyllönen (b.
1955) above all a form of human communication, of sharing feelings with others and the experience of being fellow humans.
As one of his missions he has undertaken to seek out values such as virtue, righteousness and truth in the violent, chaotic world of today. The fundamental essence is thus the emotional aspect of the music, for although the world, its ideals and Zeitgeist are in a constant state of transformation, the human emotions are nevertheless lasting and universal.
