English Summary:

The CIRCWASTE Reuse project was implemented at a socially excellent juncture in the construction of a circular economy. Networking among reuse actors was enthusiastically embraced, and it was not challenging to engage individuals and organizations in the project.

During the project, the RENET Reuse Network was established, laying the groundwork for its operational prerequisites. The primary mission of the network is seen as collectively influencing societal conditions to improve the operating conditions of reuse actors in society.

The project involved extensive discussions about quality and its development in the reuse sector. These discussions resulted in services provided by RENET, including environmental savings calculations, tools for improving their own operations, and a reuse barometer that explores the sector.

The project team expresses the hope that RENET will flourish and spread its wings!
